First Lady Hoops It Up for Kids' Health

IN THE LOOP: First lady Michelle Obama hula-hoops on the South Lawn of the White House during an event promoting exercise and healthy eating for children on Wednesday. About 100 local elementary school students and parents saw Obama do an impressive 142 swivels before her hoop hit the ground. Obama then tried to persuade skeptical children to choose healthy snacks.

U.S. Set To Slash Exec Pay

Highest salaries at bailed-out companies face 90 percent cut

WASHINGTON | The Obama administration plans to order companies that received huge U.S. government financial bailouts last year to sharply cut the compensation of their highest-paid executives, according to a person familiar with the decision.

The seven companies that received the most assistance will have to cut the annual salaries of their 25 highest-paid executives by an average of about 90 percent from last year, said the person, who spoke on condition of anonymity because it has not been announced.

The person said the Treasury Department will announce the deep pay cuts within the next few days.

Kenneth Feinberg, the special master at Treasury appointed by Obama to handle compensation issues at the seven firms getting exceptional assistance from the government's $700 billion financial bailout package, is making the pay decisions.

The seven companies are Bank of America Corp., American International Group Inc., Citigroup Inc., General Motors, GMAC, Chrysler and Chrysler Financial. (AP)

Hero Hoax Ends With Guilty Plea

Marine admits lying about service to earn free entry to events

QUANTICO, VA. | A Marine Corps sergeant who pleaded guilty to pretending to be an injured hero to get in free to concerts and sporting events has been sentenced to 18 months in prison.

Sgt. David Budwah pleaded guilty to several charges, including making false statements, malingering and misconduct. Budwah was also fined $25,000 and reduced in rank to private, and will be dishonorably discharged.

Budwah acknowledged he was never deployed to Iraq or Afghanistan, as he claimed. He said he lied about having helped with the 2004 tsunami relief effort and didn't earn the eight medals and ribbons he wore on his uniform.

"The truth of it is, I was never deployed, and I was never injured," Budwah said. "Everything that I said was false." david dishneau (AP)

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., center, said revoking the health care industry's antitrust exemption would cut down on "price-fixing."

Democrats Issue Threat

Health care insurers could lose exemption from antitrust laws

WASHINGTON | Democrats launched a drive at both ends of the Capitol on Wednesday to strip the insurance industry of its decades-old exemption from federal antitrust laws, part of an increasingly bareknuckled struggle over landmark health care legislation.

If enacted, the change would put an end to "price-fixing, bidrigging and market allocation in the health and medical malpractice" insurance areas, said Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee. Leahy said he would seek a vote on the plan when the Senate debates health care legislation in the next few weeks.

Leahy made his comments at virtually the same time the House Judiciary Committee voted 20-9 to end an industry exemption that dates to 1945. Three Republicans supported the move.

Senior Democratic officials in the House said the leadership was inclined to incorporate the measure into the broader health care bill.

The events coincided with a vote in the Senate to sidetrack legislation averting a 21 percent cut in Medicare payments for doctors in January and raising their fees by $247 billion over a decade. The 47-53 vote was 13 short of the 60 needed to advance the bill, reflecting concerns that the measure would have raised deficits. The result was a defeat for Democrats and an embarrassment for the American Medical Association, which had mounted an advertising effort in support of the bill.

Republicans grumbled that Senate Democrats timed the offensive on antitrust matters to obscure their defeat on the bill setting pay rates for doctors, a measure that GOP leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., called "the Senate's first vote on health care this year."

Even so, taken together, the threats to revoke long-standing antitrust protections reflect the fury Democrats have projected in response to recent insurance industry attempts to influence the shape of legislation. The events occurred less than a week after the insurers' trade association issued a report saying a measure in the Senate Finance Committee would produce sharp increases in insurance premiums for millions of people. LAW ENFORCEMENT Chance They Find It: 0 Percent Police in Naples, Fla., are on the lookout for their stash of cocaine. A 2-gram package of the drug was discovered missing this summer from a narcotics kit that was used in the training of drug-sniffing dogs. Two officers lost the package in April, but they say they're unsure where they left it. It could've been left in the police parking lot or in an airport rental car, but the likely spot was a hotel. The officers weren't reprimanded — their supervisors say it was an honest mistake. (AP)

Only 13 million doses of vaccine have been manufactured so far

SWIFTWATER, PA. | The federal government originally promised 120 million doses of swine flu vaccine by now. Only 13 million have come through.

As nervous Americans clamor for the vaccine, production is running several weeks behind schedule, and health officials blame the pressure on pharmaceutical companies to crank it out along with the ordinary flu vaccine, and a slow and antiquated process that relies on millions of chicken eggs.

There have been other bottle-

Health officials say there will be enough of the swine flu vaccine for everyone.

necks, too: Factories that put the liquid into syringes have become backed up. And the government itself ran into a delay in developing the tests required to assess each batch before it is cleared for use.

What effect the delays will have on the course of the outbreak is unclear, in part because scientists cannot say with any certainty just how dangerous the virus is, how easily it spreads or whether it will mutate into a more lethal form.

In the meantime, many states have had to postpone mass vaccinations. Clinics across the country that managed to obtain doses of the vaccine have been swamped. And doctors are getting bombarded with calls from parents.

Federal officials counsel patience, saying that eventually there should be enough of both vaccines for everyone who wants them. MICHAEL RUBINKAM (AP)

In Talks, Senator Had Karzai's Ear

Kerry played crucial role in negotiations over Afghan runoff

WASHINGTON | Afghan President Hamid Karzai needed high-level American arm-twisting over several tense days — and meals that included "gallons of tea" and endless platters of lamb — before he finally agreed to a runoff vote in the country's fraud-plagued presidential election.

A senior American official briefed on the meetings by Sen. John Kerry gave The Associated Press details of the negotiations with Karzai. The talks lasted late into several nights, continued through endless meals and went on for hours each day.

President Obama singled out the work of Kerry, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Ambassador Karl Eikenberry, who, the president said, "have been working tirelessly throughout this process." Kerry and Obama met Wednesday at the White House for a debriefing.

Kerry opened up to Karzai about his own decision not to challenge the vote count on election night in 2004.

Talks began on Friday and continued through late Tuesday afternoon, hours beyond the scheduled start of a news conference at which Karzai was to have announced his agreement to a second-round ballot.

The official, who spoke on a condition of anoynomity about the private talks, said Karzai had become "shaky" and was suffering "buyer's remorse" by noon Tuesday. That was shortly before the news conference at which he was to announce his agreement to the runoff. He needed several more hours of convincing, including a long walk with Kerry on the Presidential Palace grounds.

During the extended stroll, the official said, Kerry opened up to Karzai, telling him about his own difficult decision not to challenge the vote count in Ohio on election night in 2004. There were allegations of voting irregularities in favor of incumbent President Bush, and Kerry told Karzai that he knew he could have held up a final outcome for weeks by filing a challenge.

The official said Kerry told Karzai that he had decided then that a challenge was "not in the interests of an already divided and politically weary country."

Karzai headed to a small mosque on the compound to clear his head. Then — at 4:50 p.m. Kabul time — Kerry, Karzai and Eikenberry walked back into the palace to face reporters.

The deal was finally done. STEVEN R. HURST (AP)

Feds: Men Plotted to Strike Malls

Suspects allegedly wanted to carry out holy war on the U.S.

BOSTON | A pharmacy college graduate made a defiant appearance in federal court Wednesday, hours after being charged with conspiring with two other men in a terror plot to kill two prominent U.S. politicians and carry out a holy war by attacking shoppers in U.S. malls and American troops in Iraq.

Authorities say the men's plans — in which they used code words like "peanut butter and jelly" for fighting in Somalia and "culinary school" for terrorist camps — were thwarted in part when they could not find training or automatic weapons, authorities said.

Tarek Mehanna, 27, was arrested Wednesday morning at his parents' home in Sudbury, Mass. When ordered by the judge to stand to hear the charge against him, he refused. He finally did stand — tossing his chair loudly to the floor — only after his father urged him to do so.

"This really, really is a show," his father, Ahmed Mehanna, said. When asked whether he believed the charges against his son, he said, "No, definitely not."

Prosecutors say Mehanna worked with two men from 2001 to May 2008 on the conspiracy to "kill, kidnap, maim or injure" soldiers and two politicians who were members of the executive branch but are no longer in office. Authorities refused to identify the politicians.

Mehanna — a graduate of the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy — allegedly conspired with Ahmad Abousamra, who authorities say is now in Syria, and an unnamed man, who is cooperating in the investigation.

Mehanna's attorney, J.W. Carney Jr., would not comment on the allegations. Denise Lavoie (AP)

Guards Thwart Attempted Hijacking on EgyptAir Flight

Security guards thwarted an attempted hijacking Wednesday on an EgyptAir flight from Istanbul to Cairo by overpowering a man who threatened crew members, an official for the airline said. A Sudanese man used a plastic knife from the in-flight meal to threaten flight attendants after the plane left Turkish airspace and demanded that the plane fly to Jerusalem, the official said. Guards on the flight detained the man, and no one was hurt, he said. (AP)

Lawyers for Roman Polanski split on strategies Wednesday, with one suggesting for the first time that Polanski might voluntarily return to the U.S. to face justice in California for having sex with a 13-year-old girl. # Iran Envoy Backs Uranium Deal

IAEA chief hopeful Tehran will approve plan to curb weapons

VIENNA | A top Iranian negotiator praised a plan Wednesday that would ship most of his country's uranium abroad for enrichment and limit its ability to build a nuclear weapon. There was no guarantee, however, that Tehran's leaders would accept the idea.

In seven years of back-andforth diplomatic wrangling, Iran has appeared to accept previous proposals meant to ease fears it might be seeking weapons capability — only to later reject those same proposals. The West says that has given the country time to build its civilian nuclear program and its capacity to generate fissile warhead material.

At the end of three days of talks, International Atomic Energy Agency chief Mohamed ElBaradei said representatives of Iran and its three interlocutors — the U.S., Russia and France — had accepted his draft agreement for forwarding to their capitals.

ElBaradei said he hoped for approval from all four nations by Friday, adding: "I cross my fingers."

Iranian envoy Ali Asghar Soltanieh, left, gives a speech after meeting with representatives from France, Russia and the U.S

Iran's refusal to curb its enrichment program has led to three sets of U.N. Security Council sanctions, and it was unclear whether the leaders of the Islamic Republic were ready to deal away their strategic leverage and compromise on their quest for nuclear independence.

Iran insists it has a right to uranium enrichment to create fuel for a nuclear reactor network to generate power, and it dismisses suspicions that it could use the technology to make weapons-grade material for missile payloads.

Ali Asghar Soltanieh, Iran's chief delegate, praised the draft, saying it was "on the right track," while emphasizing that senior Iranian officials in Tehran still had to sign off on it.

"We have to thoroughly study this text and also [need] further elaboration in capitals," Soltanieh said.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Ian Kelly said the draft agreement was "a very positive step." George Jahn (AP)

'Intense' Action in Pakistani Battle

Soldiers try to secure hometown of Taliban chief in symbolic fight

PARACHINAR, PAKISTAN | Soldiers fought for the Pakistani Taliban chief's hometown Wednesday as they pressed an offensive along the Afghan border, while intelligence officials said U.S. missiles hit territory controlled by another insurgent, threatening to undermine deals that keep some militants out of the battle.

The five-day-old offensive in South Waziristan is considered a critical test of nuclear-armed Pakistan's campaign against Islamist extremists blamed for soaring attacks at home and on Western forces in neighboring Afghanistan. On Tuesday, suicide attacks killed six people at a university in Islamabad, leading Pakistan to temporarily close all educational institutions.

The military is advancing on multiple fronts in South Waziristan, a tribal region home to al-Qaeda fighters and Taliban insurgents who have focused on overthrowing the U.S.-allied Pakistani government.

Pakistani soldiers hold positions near Afghanistan's border on Wednesday.

The fight for the town of Kotkai is symbolically important because Pakistani Taliban chief Hakimullah Mehsud and a top deputy, Qari Hussain, hail from there. Kotkai also lies on the way to the major militant base of Sararogha.

An army statement Wednesday said forces were engaged in "intense encounters" in hills surrounding Kotkai and had secured an area to its east. Two intelligence officials said troops had secured parts of the town and destroyed Mehsud's and Hussain's homes, but army spokesman Maj. Gen. Athar Abbas denied that late Wednesday, saying there was no significant fighting inside the town yet.

Biden Woos E. Europeans

Poland agrees to host a scaled-down U.S. missile defense base

WARSAW, POLAND | Vice President Joe Biden sought reconciliation with America's staunch allies in Eastern Europe Wednesday, starting with Poland, which eagerly signed on to a revamped U.S. missile shield.

A month after the Obama administration stung Poland by scrapping a Bush-era plan that would have placed a major antimissile base in the country, the Polish prime minister and president gave their backing to the scaleddown alternative. That was an achievement for Biden, who will take his message to Romania and the Czech Republic.

Premier Donald Tusk signed on to President Obama's revamped U.S. missile shield, declaring Poland ready to participate in the project, which is intended to counter threats from Iran.

Vice President Joe Biden, left, and Polish Prime Minister Donald Tusk leave a news conference in Warsaw, Poland, after announcing a new missile defense shield plan.

"I want to stress that Poland views ... the new configuration for the missile shield as very interesting, necessary, and we are ready ... to participate," Tusk told reporters at a news conference with Biden.

The Obama plan would place SM-3 anti-ballistic missiles at a former air base in the town of Redzikowo in northern Poland — the same site that was to host U.S. missile interceptors in underground silos under the Bush plan.

Poland views hosting a U.S. missile defense base as a means to cement its security ties with Washington, particularly in the face of a resurgent Russia.

Moscow, meanwhile, perceives the new plan as less threatening because it wouldn't initially involve inceptors capable of shooting down Russia's intercontinental ballistic missiles, experts say. (AP)

Authorities announce new steps to prevent fraud in Nov. 7 poll

KABUL | Afghan authorities plan to close thousands of polling stations and hire new poll workers to discourage the fraud that tarnished the August presidential election and forced a runoff set for Nov. 7, U.N. officials said Wednesday.

President Hamid Karzai's rival, former foreign minister Abdullah Abdullah, announced Wednesday he was ready to contest the runoff, a day after the incumbent acknowledged under intense U.S. pressure that he fell short of the 50 percent threshold needed for victory in the Aug. 20 election. U.N.-backed auditors threw out nearly a third of Karzai's votes because of fraud.

In Washington, U.S. officials said a power-sharing deal between Karzai and Abdullah to avoid a runoff was still possible although it would be up to the Afghans.

U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon has said it would be a "huge challenge" to hold another election without repeating massive fraud. Heidi vogt and robert H. Reid (AP)

Train Crash Kills 22 People in India

Passenger train rams another, injuring 16; rescues take hours

NEW DELHI | A passenger train in northern India crashed into another train's rear carriage reserved for women and disabled passengers, killing 22 people and injuring 16 who remained trapped for hours Wednesday near Agra, the home of the Taj Mahal, police said.

Rescuers had to cut open the wrecked compartment to free trapped passengers after the crash outside Agra, about 130 miles southeast of New Delhi. said Rajesh Bajpai, a railway spokesman.

Rescuers recovered 19 bodies during an operation that lasted nearly seven hours, said Rajesh Dixit, a police spokesman. Three of the 19 injured people died at a hospital, police said.

No foreigners were among the victims, Dixit said.

A man grieves near the body of his mother, who was killed in the train accident.

The two trains were heading to New Delhi from southern India. The Mewar Express was stopped at a red signal when the other train rammed it from behind, Sharma, the district magistrate, told The Associated Press.

"We felt a massive jolt," said Ramesh Charan, a passenger aboard the Mewar Express. "Some people sleeping on upper berths fell to the coach floor by the impact of the collision."

Authorities are still trying to determine why the accident happened, rail official Sri Prakash said. ASHOK SHARMA (AP)

Flu Vaccine Clinic Overrun

Md. facility forced to turn away dozens for H1N1 shots, mists

An orderly but alternately resigned and annoyed crowd of roughly 1,000 lined up outside a Rockville clinic Wednesday seeking to nab some of a limited supply of H1N1 flu vaccinations.

Many weren't going to get it, and some were giving up. By 10 a.m., officials were down to just 100 doses of the flu shots and 1,000 doses of the nasal mist. Pregnant women, children younger than 2, and people with underlying medical conditions can get only the shot because of the way it's made.

By 10:15 a.m., officials announced they were out of the injectable vaccine, and dozens of disappointed parents started leaving.

Janet McCormick of Loudoun County waited for more than three hours but failed to get the vaccine. She and her cousin are both pregnant, and McCormick's 3-year-old son is asthmatic.

"I'm just scared," she said. "I'm doing everything I can to get the vaccine. I'm not angry, because there's more of a demand than a supply. So, just put your best effort forward to protect yourself and your kids. I also came prepared that I probably wasn't going to get it."

Florence Campi and her husband, Morris, also waited more than three hours before being turned away. They were told they were too old for the flu mist, which has a cutoff age of 49. "It's poor planning. I'm not happy with the whole situation," Morris Campi said.

Private fund assumes maintenance duties of 13 acres from NPS

WASHINGTON | Repair work was under way Wednesday at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial on the National Mall as a private memorial fund took over landscaping and maintenance of 13 acres from the National Park Service.

memorial wall, which draws millions of visitors each year.

The Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, which built the memorial, also has repaired an irrigation system and is reseeding and sodding the grass.

Last month, the group announced plans to raise more than $1 million to care for the memorial and grounds because of scarce funding from the federal government, including $500,000 to buy replacement granite if sections of the wall need to be replaced in the future.

"Everybody has the same goal: We want it to look good," said fund spokeswoman Lisa Gough. (AP)

Zorn Briefly Considered Quitting

NFL Hall of Famer, friend Largent says coach had ultimatum

REDSKINS | Redskins coach Jim Zorn briefly considered resigning Sunday night after the team's management told him he must relinquish his play-calling responsibilities or lose his job, former congressman Steve Largent, a longtime friend of Zorn's, said Wednesday.

"It's something that he thought about for a moment," Largent said in a telephone interview. "But just in his heart, he wasn't ready to give up. It's just not something that he would ever do. He has too much integrity and class. And he's a guy who just really loves the game. So, I don't think that was ever a real serious option for him."

The revelation that Zorn con-

Redskins coach Jim Zorn casts a shadow as he leaves the podium after his postgame press conference after a loss to the previously winless Chiefs last Sunday.

WORDS FROM THE WISE

Ex-Colts head coach and NBC football analyst Tony Dungy commented on Zorn's predicament:

il can't recall ever seeing anything like this, at least not in the past 15 years or so," the Super Bowl-winning coach said. "It's really seemed strange to me the whole way through. I like Jim Zorn a lot and I hope this works, but there's not a history of this type of stuff working out well."

sidered quitting was one of several details revealed by sources familiar with the Sunday night shake-up that followed the Redskins' 14-6 loss to the Kansas City Chiefs, a defeat that dropped Washington's record to 2-4.

Three sources said Zorn has told associates that before he left FedEx Field for home Sunday evening, he had discussions with Redskins lawyers in addition to Vinny Cerrato, the team's executive vice president of football operations. The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Zorn was told by the Redskins officials that he would be fired if he did not give up his play-calling responsibilities.

The lawyers, who the sources did not identify, produced Zorn's contract and reiterated to him that he had to do as Redskins owner Daniel Snyder wished. Through a team spokesman, Zorn and team officials declined to comment.

"They went to the point of pulling out his contract and said, 'You have to do whatever the owner tells you to do," Largent told a Seattle radio station.

"His choice was to either resign or to continue on under the current scenario. Jim's not a quitter. He said he wasn't going to quit on his coaching staff and quit on this team." RICK MAESE AND JASON REID (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Morrison Feeds Capitals' Attack

Forward makes his living assisting on teammates' goals

CAPITALS | When told that heading into Wednesday night's NHL action his new first line center Brendan Morrison ranked second in the league in shooting percentage after scoring three goals on eight shots, Capitals coach Bruce Boudreau's response was simple.

"That tells me he should shoot more," Boudreau deadpanned. It's a sentiment the 34-year-old Morrison has grown accustomed to. Whether it has been peewee hockey or centering the prolific "West Coast Express" line with Marcus Naslund and Todd Bertuzzi in Vancouver, he's always been pass-first.

"I've heard that probably from the time I was 10 years old, so I tell myself every year, 'Shoot more," When it comes down to it, my instincts are just to move the puck."

-CAPS FORWARD BRENDAN MORRISON

said Morrison. "But when it comes down to it, my instincts are just to move the puck."

When he was signed to a oneyear, $1.5 million contract in the off-season, nobody knew what to expect out of Morrison. Management figured he could fill the void left by Sergei Fedorov as the team's second-line center, but a knee injury in 2007-08 not only ended that season short; it also wreaked havoc on his play last year, splitting time between Anaheim and Dallas. He had just 29 points in 81 games.

"I think it was an aberration; I just didn't have my skating legs," explained Morrison, who between 2000 and 2007 averaged 60 points a season. "I just couldn't get to places, and it was frustrating."

Last week, though, in hopes of creating more balance offensively, Boudreau elevated Morrison to the first line alongside Alex Ovechkin and rugged winger Mike Knuble. In two games, he's already assisted on three Ovechkin goals, including two in a span of 28 seconds in a 4-1 win over San Jose. The Caps next face Atlanta on Thursday.

"I'm having fun this year, and that helps a lot," said Morrison. "When you're enjoying what you do, you seem to be energized."

Caps' Nylander Heads to AHL for Conditioning Stint

CAPITALS | The Washington Capitals have assigned center Michael Nylander to Grand Rapids of the AHL for a conditioning stint, giving the bench-sitting veteran

a chance to get back on the ice.

Nylander hasn't played all season, having fallen out of favor with the coaching staff and front office.

The Capitals have not traded the 37-year-old forward, because of his $5.5 million salary and the nomovement clause in his contract.

Nylander will continue to count against the Capitals' 23-man roster, but the move to Grand Rapids gives him the opportunity to play without taking playing time from other prospects. (AP)

Hatch wants Obama to intervene to help reform playoff system

COLLEGE FOOTBALL | Shortly after winning last year's election, President Obama said he was going "to throw my weight around a little bit" to nudge college football's Bowl Championship Series to move to a playoff system.

On Wednesday, Sen. Orrin Hatch took him up on that.

Hatch asked the president to launch a Justice Department investigation into the way the BCS - acomplex system of computer rankings and polls that often draws criticism — crowns its champion.

"Mr. President, as you have publicly stated on multiple occasions, the BCS system is in dire need of reform," Hatch, R-Utah, wrote in a 10-page letter obtained by The Associated Press. Hatch, added "strong case" can be made that the BCS violates antitrust laws. (AP)

United in Store for a 'Crazy' Finish

Numerous playoff scenarios offer hope for desperate squad

UNITED | The scoreboard watching begins Thursday night for desperate D.C. United.

In Trinidad, D.C.'s Champions League fate will hinge on whether winless San Juan Jabloteh can avoid defeat against Honduras' Marathon, while in Chicago the Fire will host Chivas USA in the first of a half-dozen MLS games that will determine which three of the seven contending clubs earn the remaining playoff spots.

"It's crazy this year. Anything can happen," D.C. coach Tom Soehn said.

With last Saturday's 1-0 win over league-leading Columbus, United (9-8-12) pulled into a fourway tie for the eighth and final berth. D.C. plays at Kansas City (8-13-8) on Saturday night, but its future likely won't be determined until the final two matches are played on Sunday. The permutations are nearly endless. United theoretically could qualify with just a tie but also easily could be eliminated with a victory.

"We can still finish second in the [Eastern Conference], that's how crazy things are. Right now, all we're concerned with is that we kept our hopes alive and put ourselves in a spot where we keep fighting for another day," said Soehn, whose future in Washington depends on sneaking into the postseason.

Last weekend's win and Tuesday night's 1-1 Champions League tie at Toluca present a few reasons for optimism. Although not the more talented team in either match, D.C. demonstrated the sort of 90-minute dedication that should serve it well Saturday.

New goalkeeper Steve Cronin, signed to replace the injured Josh Wicks, appeared comfortable in both games, while role players filled in decently as Soehn juggled his lineup to keep veterans fresh. Rookie of the Year candidate Chris Pontius gives Soehn an attractive option in midfield in the absence of Santino Quaranta (broken foot).

MLS PLAYOFF RACE

Seven teams are competing for three remaining spots:

- Chicago has the most points (42) of the group, followed by Colorado (40). D.C. is one of four teams with 39 points. Salt Lake has 37.
- → Ties will be broken with headto-head results, followed by goal differential.
- → D.C.'s best bet is to win Saturday, and hope New York tops Toronto Saturday and Columbus defeats New England Sunday.
- → United would advance over Chicago and Dallas head-to-head but is in trouble against other clubs or if there is a three-way tie or more.

"We still have a little hope," captain Jaime Moreno said.

Rodriguez, Sabathia close in on their first trip to World Series

MLB PLAYOFFS | None of the New York Yankees' 26 world championships include Alex Rodriguez or CC Sabathia. The splendid slugger and the workhorse starter both acknowledge that until they win a title, they're still not a big part of their club's hallowed history.

The way Rodriguez is hitting and Sabathia is pitching in the AL championship series, it's clear they're determined to put rings on their hired hands. And after their two-man demolition of the Angels on Tuesday night, they're both one win away from playing in their first World Series.

Rodriguez connected on his fifth homer of the postseason while getting three hits, Sabathia pitched eight stellar innings on three days' rest, and the Yankees beat Los Angeles 10-1 to take a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven ALCS.

"I've been feeling good," said Sabathia, who has won three of New York's seven playoff games. "Hopefully, I'll just keep it going, keep it rolling, and we win the whole thing." GREG BEACHAM (AP)

ESPN's Phillips Admits to Affair With Assistant

NEW YORK | ESPN baseball analyst Steve Phillips admits to having an affair with an assistant at the cable network who taunted his wife with phone calls and a letter graphically describing their relationship, the New York Post reported Wednesday.

After production assistant Brooke Hundley, 22, was dropped by Phillips, she repeatedly called his wife, Marni, saying, "We both can't have him," the newspaper reported, citing a Wilton, Conn., police report.

The Phillips, 46, is a former general manager of the New York Mets. Phillips to admitted to having sex with a team employee, who sued for sexual harassment. That case was settled out of court. (AP)

Filmmaker Joe Berlinger's

latest film, "Crude," is about the case filed against U.S. oil company Chevron by 30,000 rain forest dwellers in the Amazon jungle of Ecuador. They claim that for 30 years, Texaco, which merged with Chevron in 2001, contaminated their water, air and land, and that the results have been health problems such as cancer and birth defects. Berlinger, who made the films "Paradise Lost" and "Some Kind of Monster," followed the court case and visited contaminated fields to tell this tale.

How did you get involved with this project?

Steven Donzinger, the American attorney [for the Ecuadorian plaintiffs], came to my office and asked if I'd be interested in the story. I went into it with reluctance since I'm a multi-viewpoint filmmaker who doesn't like to use narration — I let things unfold and let the viewer make up their own mind about what they're seeing. It's also been a 13-year struggle, and since my style is present tense, I felt like I missed the story. I was also concerned that I wouldn't raise money for this kind of film.

What made you change your mind?

I agreed to go to the region, and as soon as I landed in the jungle and smelled petroleum and talked to mothers forced to give their children poisonous water, I felt my resistance starting to wear down. I was shocked at what had been done to the region, and I was dumbfounded at the level of environmental degradation and disregard for the people who live there.

Did you have trouble gaining behind-the-scenes access?

It was actually surprisingly easy to gain access in Ecuador. We stuck

⊁ Joe Berlinger

cameras in trials, judges' offices, and I was shocked at the almost unprecedented access behind the scenes of a legal case.

What were some of the challenges you ran into with filming?

The shoot was incredibly strenuous and difficult. It was 120-degree heat at the equator, the pollution pits smelled horribly and gave you headaches and teary eyes; we were in a malaria zone, so we had to wear heavy clothing and cover ourselves up with bug spray. At times, we were a mile and a half from the Colombian border, where guerrillas are very active ... and there's kidnapping of Americans.

What was your goal for the film?

The film tries to be neutral, since I'm not a scientist or lawyer and I can't tell you whether Chevron presented enough legal technicalities to prevail, so it's about larger issues. The lawsuit is inadequate to address this large-scale humanitarian and environmental crisis that could take decades to resolve, so at the very least I hope to create awareness that our consumption patterns here have an effect on people around the globe.

The Pros of Con Men

Ben Jonson's dirty rotten scoundrels lift loot and laughs

STAGE | You really can fool some of the people all of the time. At least that's the premise that drives the new-millennial spin on Ben Jonson's "The Alchemist" currently being performed by the Shakespeare Theatre Company at Lansburgh Theatre.

The farcical action centers on a butler — Face (Michael Milligan) — who enlists two ethically challenged, disguise-loving pals Subtle (Davis Manis) and Dol Common (Kate Skinner), to charm and cheat the neighbors out their money, women and silverware. To do this, the trio impersonate characters from a decorated army captain (Face) to a cymbal-clanging hippie healer (Subtle).

Jonson knew that sending up hypocrites, preferably in funny costumes, makes even rogues look like heroes. So, in a Georgetown-esque townhouse scene, Face, Subtle and Dol proceed to trick everyone from a Donald Trump-like moneyman, Sir Epicure Mammon, to a revival-meeting preacher straight out of Fox news called Tribulation Wholesome.

It's all silly, showy stuff, with lots of fake mustaches, fart jokes and bawdy bits about lady bits whizzing around. The costume changes lead to such inspired wardrobe pieces as what appears to be a solid-gold suit and a Glenda the Good Witch getup for the blowsy Dol, who convinces a gambler she's the queen of the fairies.

That this hysterical house of cards doesn't collapse around the crew seems unbelievable in this age of Bernie Madoff and Enron, but watching their schemes unfold - and fold back on themselves proves so distracting, you'll likely be taken in by their tricks, too. JENNIFER BARGER (EXPRESS)

The Bentzen Ball comedy fest might just cause a laugh riot

COMEDY | When Tig Notaro first performed in Washington, at last year's D.C. Comedy Festival, she had a great time. So when she found out the festival wouldn't return this year, she was disappointed.

"I just thought, 'Maybe I'll just go ahead and put the festival together," Notaro said. "It just seems like a great city and it seemed like a waste, especially with how excited people have been about politics and Obama. ... It just seemed so prime."

She reached out to the people behind D.C.-based scenester Web site Brightest Young Things, who she befriended during last year's trip, and they were excited. With a Rolodex of comedian friends, Notaro began mobilizing. Getting people was easy, and organizing thanks to Notaro's background in music promotion and with the help of BYT - was very doable. Coming up with a name for the thing, though, was a different story.

"The guys at Brightest Young Things had an idea for a name of a festival, and they were excited about it and I hated it," she said. "I couldn't get behind the idea. It was Jokes. ... Even if you're trying to be ironic, it just misses the boat."

Their next best idea? Name it after Ole Bentzen, a Danish audiologist who laughed to death while watching the 1988 John Cleese film "A Fish Called Wanda."

"Everybody really cracks up when you find out. ... It's ridiculous," she said.

"It's beautiful — what a great way to die," said Patton Oswalt, who headlines the first night of what's now known as the Bentzen

Ball. With the likes of Oswalt and Sarah Silverman headlining, the ball is getting hyped as an altcomedy festival.

"I think, for me, alt comedy always meant that the comedian has no expectations about the audience, and the audience has no expectations about the comedian," Oswalt said.

But Notaro doesn't seem to put much stake in the label. "People can call it alt, indie - anything they want," she said. "But to me, it's more a festival of comedians that I think are great. It's my sensibility. ... I guess we don't have the most across-the-board lineup of mainstream, but I think you can certainly find everything in there."

Howard University alum Seaton Smith, who's had viral success with his "Pimpin' Referee" skit, is not used to performing with these kind of comedians, and he's excited.

"It's going to be cool, man," Smith said. "It's kind of like indierock meets comedy, even though there's no music that I know of. It still has the vibe. I'm hoping it has the women, too."

Smith is one of many D.C.-based comedians at the Bentzen Ball each show has one to three locals opening - making the festival a formidable showcase.

That support is something Smith, who relies on a narrative type of comedy with a lot of D.C.based humor, appreciates.

"She really made that a point to kind of bring the scene in there because our scene is not very known around the country," he said. "Every comic who comes here is surprised by how many great stages there are here on a day-to-day basis."

At its core, though, the Bentzen Ball is a festival built on friendship. Most of the comedians are performing because they're Notaro's friends. It's all a community. "You always want to [play] with your friends when you can," Oswalt said. "Comedians riff jokes off each other, even if it's not something you're going to do onstage, you're always joking around."

And if all goes well, Notaro hopes, the Bentzen Ball will become a fixture in D.C.

"This has accidentally become, I would say, one of the bigger festivals in the country," Notaro said. "It's just really funny that that happened."

It sure is. RUDI GREENBERG (EXPRESS)

Pianist and composer Michael Wolff pays tribute to his Southern roots and his mentors at the Kennedy Center this Saturday.

A Rootsy Ramble

Michael Wolff gets back to his Southern roots on his latest album, 'Joe's Strut'

MUSIC | Although pianist/composer Michael Wolff dedicates the title track of his latest disc, "Joe's Strut," to late jazz-fusion keyboardist Joe Zawinul, the disc is more about his return to his Southern roots.

Having grown up in New Orleans with a father from Mississippi, the first tune Wolff learned to play was "St. Louis Blues" when he was only 4 years old. He soon began absorbing the songs of New Orleans pianists such as Professor Longhair and James Booker.

So, after a three-decade career that included being the music director for "The Arsenio Hall Show" Wolff began to reflect on getting older and his past.

"My mother died this year; that kind of made me think differently," Wolff says. "I'm now thinking, 'Where am I really connecting? What really connects me to the music?' In some ways, I'm seeing jazz in a different light now — really more as a language. I was always trying to push it and feel intellectually obligated to be hip or above it all. Now, I just play whatever is inside me. I'm just going to acknowledge the language that it is and try to express myself within that language but not limit myself. I try to walk that line of having modern dissonant chords, which I really like, but also a certain bluesy warmth."

I was always trying to push it and feel intellectually obligated to be hip. ... Now, I just play whatever's inside me."

As for a nifty tie-in with Zawinul, Wolff says that it was his walk that reminded him of Professor Longhair and Booker. Zawinul also became a mentor for Wolff back in the mid '70s, when Wolff played piano for legendary alto saxophonist Cannonball Adderley. Once, Wolff asked Zawinul for pointers on how to accompany Cannonball.

"With Cannonball, we would be playing a tune in C and he would be in G# or something like that. He was very bluesy, so it didn't sound as outside as other people, but he would really play outside the chord notes and tone. I remember asking Joe, and he said, 'I don't know, but if you figure it out, please call me back, because I never figured that out." John Murph

'Angels' Are Still Among

Tony Kushner's epic play still has wings in the new millennium

STAGE | "Angels in America" is one of the few plays of the last 20 years that is already acknowledged as a classic. It is sprawling and difficult, potentially revelatory, massively ambitious.

When one, albeit two-part, play attempts to cover what it means to be gay in America, to be Jewish in America, the terror of the onset of AIDS and the meaning of love, that's ambition, and that ambition, that bravery, is what allows this truthful yet fanciful play to be truly great.

Forum Theatre's production of "Angels in America" is missing several key elements — many key performances just don't land, and the play seems to be just keeping its head above water with the difficult material rather than making it sparkle as it should. But it has heart — and it has Karl Miller, whose performance as Prior Walter, a young man dying of AIDS, is the highlight of the evening. It will probably be the highlight of your week.

Miller imbues Prior with exactly the kind of bravery we all hope we could summon in the face of a horrible fate. Jennifer Mendenhall also turns in an excellent performance, particularly in her role as an exasperated older woman lost in New York City.

But if this production of "Angels" doesn't take us to new heights, it makes a brave attempt. Part two, "Perestroika," opens on Monday and runs through Nov. 22. FIONA ZUBLIN (EXPRESS)

The Dirty Projectors use vocal harmonies as an instrument and a musical coloration

MUSIC | Dave Longstreth has three gorgeous female voices at his disposal, and he's not afraid to use them.

Meshed with his own quirky delivery, Longstreth's writing some of the most intriguing vocal parts on the current musical landscape. In his band, Dirty Projectors, Amber Coffman's, Angel Deradoorian's and Haley Dekle's voices run around each other. eventually crossing paths in perfect harmony.

"The voice is just another instrument, and you can use it [to harmonize], but it's also something else: it's this thing that can speak," Longstreth said.

His group (which also includes drummer Brian McOmber and bassist Nat Baldwin) is so impressive vocally, that seeing - or rather, hearing and seeing - really is believing. Take, for example, the Roots. The alternative hiphop group had never heard of the Brooklyn band until it played "Late Night With Jimmy Fallon" a few weeks back.

After hearing Dirty Projectors rehearsing "When the World Comes to An End," they invited the band to their dressing room to prove that what the group just did was for real and not computers.

Roots drummer Ahmir "Questlove" Thompson videotaped it and posted it to Twitter, with the following remarks: "Man. Dirty Projectors came into our room and demonstrated their awesomeness. How cool is it for them to do this?"

"It was really cool, man," Longstreth said. "I've been a fan of their stuff for a little while. It was just really kind of surprising and weird. ... ['Late Night'] was so informal and mellow - a kind of a low-key party going on in the hallway."

The video ends with Thompson inviting the band to collaborate with the Roots, something Longstreth hopes to make happen.

It's all part of Dirty Projectors' meteoric rise since June's "Bitte Orca" - from occasionally unlistenable art rock to indie-rock royalty. The album's nine songs manage to balance pop sensibilities with an experimental edge, all while remaining accessible.

"It's always been [about] songs," Longstreth said. "Music is so many things to me. One thing it is is a universe of ideas and kind of analogies to the greater world in this kind of other language. It's also just maybe even more than that it's something that you feel. What I've always wanted to do is try to bring all those elements together." RUDI GREENBERG (EXPRESS) rather niche but wildly entertaining. Nowhere else will the curious viewer find so vivid a window into a world in which death loomed daily over the helplessly young, while they grasped with both hands all the gallows humor, resignation, bravado and lust the likes of Sailor Jerry could provide. Pizzaiolo Anthony Pilla spins the dough and offers tips on how to form the best pizza at new pizza place, SeventhHill Pizza.

Tossing on the Hilltop

SeventhHill Pizza brings a piece of the pie to the suit-andtie set on Capitol Hill

CUT THE PIE | It may have only opened a few weeks ago, but SeventhHill Pizza is already garnering buzz on the D.C. dining scene.

The menu is simple — 11 pizzas with a range of toppings, a daily panino and daily soup. Pizzas are named after Capitol Hill neighborhoods, such as the Navy Yard, with tomato, Toulouse sausage, oregano and pecorino, while a daily soup might include a rich and multilayered chestnut and bacon.

SeventhHill is the brainchild of Stephane Lezla and Christopher Raynal, co-owners of French bistro Montmartre, which is next door, so it's not surprising to see French influences on the pizzas. On a recent visit, I chatted with Anthony Pilla, a pizzaiolo (male pizza chef), who came to SeventhHill via Cleveland and Chicago.

Pilla says he developed the dough and that Lezla worked on the menu.

"Each pizza is an experience,"

SeventhHill Pizza proves that less isalways best when making a good pizza.

From the owners of French bistro Montmartre come pizzas with a French twist.

he says, tossing dough into the air. "When you put heart and passion into something, it can be beautiful."

SeventhHill's pizzas are indeed beautiful, from the marriage of roasted red peppers and prosciutto on the Seventh Street pizza, to the rich goat cheese, herbs and Portobello mushrooms that adorn the Eastern Market pizza.

"We're about keeping it simple," Pilla says. "Less is more when it comes to pizza."

Pilla says the flour comes from Naples and that some of the ingredients are sourced from Eastern Market, which is a halfblock away.

Eight-inch pizzas are $10.95, and 12-inch ones are $15.95. Pair your pizza with South African wines or beers including Red Hook and Leffe.

The restaurant seats 25 indoors and 16 outdoors — sit at tables or at the wooden bar, where you can see right into the brick pizza oven. Pizza peels in different woods adorn one wall, and bright yellow stools add a splash of color to the interior. It may be small and cozy, but SeventhHill offers big flavors and taste.

SeventhHill is open Tuesday through Sunday for lunch (11 a.m.-2:30 p.m.) and dinner (5-11 p.m.).

Ghoulish Goods

Parents and kids go Halloween-hopping to find more than just candy on the menu

FRIGHTENING FARE | Most kids love to dress up, but going door-todoor begging strangers for candy is a lot of work. There's the walking and, worse, the wait: All that sugary sweetness screaming your name, and there always seems to be a few more houses to go. (Not to mention enduring the endless Mom-dictated candy inspection.) But many local eateries offer a chance for little and big sweets fans alike to get their treats now with Halloween-themed foodie events. No trick.

At EATBAR, dress as you are unless you want to win the best costume contest — to jump to the left and step to the right at a screening of "The Rocky Horror Picture Show." This one-nightonly event features cocktails such as the "Poisoned Apple" and "The Zombie Punch," and chef Barry Koslow will be stirring up scary eats including deviled eggs, blood sausage and tongue tacos.

The Odd Gang's All Here

Chevy Chase and his colleagues mesh to form the quirkiest 'Community' around

MISFITS | The punch lines are flowing on the set of "Community," and that's between scenes for NBC's sitcom about an oddball group of community college students.

Yvette Nicole Brown, who plays divorcee Shirley, is recounting a recent first date.

"He told me he's getting out of a relationship. Uh-huh," she said, dryly. "That means you're still IN a relationship."

95 percent of putting the show together. This is an ensemble comedy."

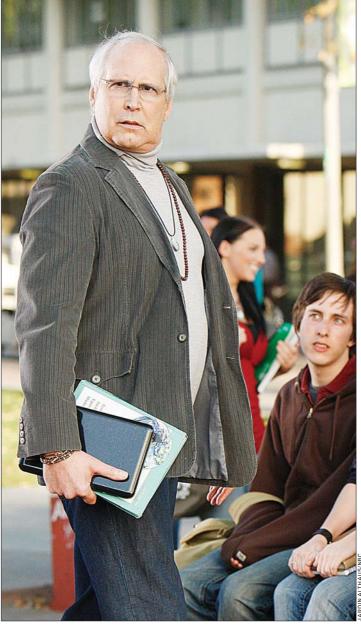

Donald Glover, when asked whether he had a nickname growing up, shakes his head.

"Being a black kid with the name Donald was enough," says the actor, who co-stars as former football star Troy.

And then there's Chevy Chase, as droll and deadpan during an interview as he was three decades ago delivering the news on "Saturday Night Live."

Does "Community" summon memories of his Bard College days in New York?

"College? No," Chase says, mis-

PATRIARCH OF SORTS: Chevy Chase plays Pierce Hawthorne, the oldest member of the "Community" group, who is a hilarious mixture of wisdom and senility.

chief clearly afoot. "If anything, it brings up my prison stint."

On-camera quips are the work of series creator Dan Harmon, but Harmon knew the actors delivering them would be key. Joel McHale, Alison Brie, Gillian Jacobs, Ken Jeong and Danny Pudi co-star as members of a study group at the fictional Greendale school.

"Casting was 95 percent of putting the show together," said Harmon. "This is an ensemble comedy."

So far, critics have given "Community" high marks while viewers still are discovering it. "Community" drew 5 million viewers last week compared with 8 million for NBC's "The Office" but is seeing growth in its advertiser-favored age 18-to-49 audience.

"Community" was inspired by the "emotional punch" of Harmon's experience at Glendale Community College, north of Los Angeles.

In the series, that's the fate of McHale's cocky Jeff, a would-be lawyer. The 66-year-old Chase was an unexpected bonus, Harmon said.

Chase returns the compliment, in his fashion. He says he was perfectly content in East Coast semi-retirement. But he was won over by Harmon's work.

"Speaking with him, you can see that he's very articulate and thoughtful and confused" — here, Chase pauses the proper number of comic beats — "about anything outside of himself. But his writing was so funny." LYNN ELBER (AP)

Pay a visit to turbulent "Borderlands."

For Itchy Trigger Fingers

'Borderlands' blends tons of guns with classic role-playing

VIDEO GAME | "Borderlands" (2K Games, for the Xbox 360, PlayStation 3, $59.99) is dedicated to aficionados of weaponry. Developer Gearbox Software says the game has "bazillions" of guns, thanks to a random content generator.

Whether you find all bazillion (actually, more than 17 million at last estimate), guns are everywhere in "Borderlands." And you will need all of them on the desolate planet of Pandora.

"Borderlands" feels like a sci-fi version of the classic role-playing game "Diablo." Their goals are the same: Kill everything, steal weapons and loot, upgrade your weapons, and kill bigger things. The difference is that this is a first-person shooter, so you get a little "Halo" mixed into your "Diablo."

Shooter and role-playing mechanics are merged well, and fans of both genres will enjoy the ride. LOU KESTEN (AP)

SERIES Special Delivery ABC is developing "I'm With Stupid," a multicamera comedy series starring Judy Greer, pictured, and co-written by Allan Loeb. Based on Elaine Szewczyk's novel, "Stupid" centers on Manhattan-born and -bred Kas Sienkiewicz (Greer), who has a fling with a seemingly perfect park ranger while on safari in South Africa. When she returns home, she wonders whether she'll ever hear from him again, only to have him arrive unannounced at her doorstep. (THE HOLLYWOOD REPORTER)

Carnie Wilson offers up her family life and weight loss plan to the Game Show Network

SERIES | Carnie Wilson is opening up her life as a working mom in a new reality TV series.

"Carnie Wilson: Unstapled" is in production and set to debut in January on GSN, which also airs "The Newlywed Game," hosted by Wilson.

A singer-songwriter with the pop group Wilson Phillips and daughter of Brian Wilson of the Beach Boys, the 41-year-old Wilson said she's comfortable being candid. Her 1999 obesity surgery was shown online.

"I've written two autobiographies and posed for Playboy. I think I've pretty much been out there," said Wilson. But, she added, "This is definitely the most exposed I've ever been."

The reality series, a departure for the network that typically airs new and old game shows, is the result of viewer response to Wilson, said Kelly Goode, GSN senior vice president for original programming and development.

"Carnie is incredibly funny and earthy. ... She's a personality the viewers have fallen in love with." Goode said.

Her dad may make an appearance on her reality show if his schedule permits, Wilson said.

Wilson, who has a newborn, Luci, and a toddler, Lola, with husband Rob Bonfiglio, said viewers will see her trying to take off about 50 pounds of "baby weight."

Besides her TV shows and music career that includes solo releases, Wilson is a spokeswoman for Liteandhope.com, a support site for those suffering from morbid obesity. The "Unstapled" in the reality show's title is a play on Wilson's gastric bypass surgery, which involved stomach stapling. LYNN ELBER (AP)

Good Morning, New Guy

ABC searches for a man to co-host its flagship show

ANCHOR | Since the news broke last month that Diane Sawyer will be leaving ABC's "Good Morning America" to replace Charles Gibson on the network's flagship evening broadcast, female broadcasters such as Ashleigh Banfield and Suze Orman have eagerly volunteered to replace her.

George Stephanopoulos is being tested to see whether he's "GMA" material.

But ABC executives are intent on finding a male anchor to pair with co-host Robin Roberts and restore the morning show's traditional male-female duo, according to multiple sources inside and outside the network. While the network has cast a wide net in its search for Sawyer's successor, it appears increasingly likely that the "GMA" co-host will be selected from within ABC's ranks, in part because contenders such as CNN's Anderson Cooper are locked in long-term contracts. A short list of candidates is widely believed to include "This Week" host George Stephanopoulos, "World News Saturday" anchor David Muir, "GMA Weekend" co-host Bill Weir and "GMA" news anchor Chris Cuomo.

As a test run, Stephanopoulos is filling in for Sawyer for the rest of this week as executives seek to measure his chemistry with Roberts and his deftness handling lighter fare. (Cuomo replaced Sawyer on Monday and Tuesday.)

Tim McGraw keeps his own success and happiness out of his melancholy music.

A Rueful, Resonant Record

Tim McGraw brings a light touch to familiar, heavy-hearted themes on 'Southern Voice'

MUSIC | Few singers have mastered the Nashville trope-a-dope quite like Tim McGraw.

"Southern Voice," the popcountry stalwart's 10th album, is teeming with characters who've populated the airwaves since Hank Williams first tamed the Opry. Homesick heroes, estranged fathers, lonely barflies — McGraw's handsome voice makes all of their stories sound fresh. He's country music's version of Febreze.

Chalk it up to the man's unflappable delivery, the kind of self-assured croon that comes with being incredibly handsome and owning the pipes to match. (Selling more than 40 million albums probably doesn't hurt the old ego, either.)

So cocksure is McGraw, he flaunts the punch line of his latest single without a spoiler alert — it's the title of the song.

"It's a Business Doing Pleasure

With You" finds the 42-year-old draining his wallet for a material girl who subsists on designer handbags and four-figure pooch accoutrements.

"All my credit cards are cookin'/ Girl, you don't know what you're putting me through!" the singer exclaims, a Hammond organ moaning sympathetically while the drummer slaps out an amicable backbeat.

It's a kick, but the good times don't roll over into the rest of "Southern Voice." The album is a largely somber collection where the lyrical clichés go zipping by like so many passing trains.

The album is a somber collection where the lyrical clichés go zipping by like so many passing trains.

McGraw's saddest tale is undoubtedly the album's best cut. "Mr. Whoever You Are" is an emotive waltz starring a young woman who dances her nights away at the local drinking hole. The song never actually mentions her loneliness, but McGraw's somber tones make it feel positively soul-crushing.

Rarely does vanilla taste so bittersweet. chris richards (THE WASHINGTON POST)

The Puppet Man Cometh

Ventriloquist Jeff Dunham reaches out to a broad audience

COMEDY | Tonight, Comedy Central turns to a practitioner of one of the oldest traditions in comedy who just happens to be the host of the most-watched special in the network's history.

Ventriloquists aren't considered edgy, and "The Jeff Dunham Show" (10:30 p.m., Comedy Central) doesn't go that route. Dunham has an every-guy appeal and a slight resemblance to Kiefer Sutherland's Jack Bauer that transcends the urban/rural, red/blue divide. He'd be equally at home at a comedy club or a county fair.

Like puppet masters going back to Edgar Bergen and beyond,

Dunham "hosts" a series of regular characters. There's Walter, an Archie Bunker type; Peanut, a pink, clueless hedonist; Bubba J, a beer-guzzling simpleton with a resemblance to Howdy Doody; and Achmed the Dead Terrorist, a skeleton wearing a turban who behaves like al-Qaeda's version of Triumph the Insult comic dog. In the series, the puppets also do location shots, seemingly unconnected to Dunham's hand.

But Dunham's material doesn't break any new ground, aiming squarely at the middlebrow of the funny bone. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)
